Los Angeles County has the distinction of being the most populated county in the nation. According to current Department of Finance estimates, the county's population is more than 9.9 million, an increase of 1.7 percent or 162,200 new residents from the previous year. In fact, Los Angeles County experienced the single largest absolute population growth in California between 2002 and 2003. The most populated city within the county is the city of Los Angeles with more than 3.8 million residents, or 38.7 percent of the total population. Total population in Los Angeles County is projected to reach over 11.5 million by the year 2020.

In addition to population growth, the civilian labor force in Los Angeles County increased to almost 4.7 million with an unemployment rate of 6.8 percent in 2002. This is slightly higher than the state's unemployment rate of 6.7 percent for the same year.

Forty-five years ago, Los Angeles was the leading farm county in the nation. However, agricultural importance has since waned due to urban and industrial expansion. Today, the county's varied economic base includes trade, transportation, and utilities, government, educational and health services, professional and business services, and manufacturing. Tourism and entertainment, as well as international trade, also play a vital role in the county's economy. According to 2002 data, the trade, transportation, and utilities industries are Los Angeles County's largest employers, providing over 19 percent of all employment.

SUBJECT PROPERTY INFORMATION

Within these industries, retail trade employs almost 400,000 with a majority of available jobs in the food and beverage stores component. Wholesale trade provides almost 218,000 jobs; of these, nearly 54 percent are in merchant wholesalers, durable goods.

Other major industries in Los Angeles County include government, professional and business services, and manufacturing. Government gained over 7,600 jobs in 2002 to provide almost 606,000 jobs, or 15 percent of the county's total employment. Within government, the largest employer is local government, specifically local government education. Despite recent industry declines, professional and business services provide a little over 14 percent of all employment. Manufacturing is also declining, yet remains an important industry providing over 536,000 jobs.

As its population grows, Los Angeles County's economy reflects these changes. Some of the county's major industries recorded declines in 2002, resulting in a 1.0 percent loss in total industry employment. Some of the job loss was offset by several growth industries, including: retail trade;
